About the topic: The number of ECUs (Electronic Control Units) in commercial vehicles is rapidly increasing. Although SAE J1939 is the standard for ECU communication, suppliers of ECUs implement the specification non-uniformly creating integration & testing issues for OEMs. Vehicle network simulation, exchange of engineering data, standardized embedded software & automated conformance testing are activities to significantly reduce the integration burden.

About the Speaker: For the past 30 years Mike Doseck has performed business development for companies marketing engineering services & products. The commercial vehicle industry has been an area of focus where Mike Doseck has created business relationships to develop emissions controls, vehicle networks, wireless vehicle interfaces & automated test environments.
